

Dr. Ranjith Pallegama is a senior lecturer in physiology attached to the Faculty of Dental Sciences, University of Peradeniya. He graduated from the Faculty of Dental Sciences with honors in 1997 and received the PhD from Tokyo Medical and Dental University in 2005. Presently he is the Director of the Staff Development Center of the University of Peradeniya. He was a reviewer (for desk reviews and site visits) for many proposals submitted by different study programs and faculties under the Higher Education for the 21st Century (HETC) project of the Ministry of Higher Education. He was instrumental in developing a 5-year curriculum for the BDS degree in place of the former 4-year degree and presently in charge of the curriculum revision of the Faculty. He has also been a resource person for curriculum revision activities of many study programs in the country. He has been a member of the Senate and the Academic Development and Planning Committee of the University. He has received presidential awards for his research publications and is the founder Chairman of the Ethics Review Committee of the Faculty. His research interests include medical education with several international publications to his credit. He has also authored several books and book chapters.